New York City uses 400,000,000 quarts of the annual output of the dairies, and so far has science taken hold there that 25 per cent of the total milk supply of the city is pasteurized. Because of this work on the part of New York philanthropists, led by Nathan Straus and his seventeer milk stations, the decrease in infant mortallty has been marked. There are enough babies in New York Cky to keep these seventeen depots and as many more busy all the year around. About 25,000 bables are born in New York each summer, and until the establishment of the Straus depots, where 2,000 are fed daily, the death rate for children under five years old was per thousand in the summer. Now it is and 62 per thousand in the summer

The present New York movement represents a combination of physicians, workers from city hospitals, charitable and municipal organizations, nurseries, diet kitchens who find an urgent need for their aiding the city health department They have been working as separate and independent organizations for the past few years. Now they mean to work as an entire body, securing better results from co-operation. More than eighty nurses will be installed for the summer work, and these will hunt out all the ba bles that have been born since April 1 and will give the mothers the necessary instructions in properly feeding, dressing and caring for them. A volunteer corps of physicians, numbering about sixty, will

New York philanthropy led the world in the establishing of milk depots where modified or pasteurized milk could be furnished the babies of the poor. Dr. Henry Koplik reported in 1890 that he had opened a laboratory at Eastern Dispensary, New York City, some time before, and later he that was recommended as a world-wide policy at the second international pure milk congress at Brussels last fall, fifteen years after the first experiment had made. Now from Mr. Straus' laboratories or depots about 3,000,000 bottles and 1,225,000 glasses of milk are distributed every season.

as bearing the expense of their milk depots. Rochester, N. Y., started the work in 1897, and now supports five through July and August, keeping a trained nurse on the farm and one at each dispensary. Cincinnati established two last year to run in summmer months, and Jersey City opened five last year to run all through the year. Cambridge, Mass., has five summer depots that are now two years old and that are supported by a combination of private philanthropy and public appropriation. Philadelphia, Cleveland, Chicago, Baltimore, Columbus, Toledo, and Boston all have depots that are open the year around, in addition to a greater keeping twenty-two open all the year around. Yonkers, Pittsburg, St. Louis, Cambridge, Providence, Kansas City, and New Bedford keep summer stations

The support that is not municipal comes from various sources. Individuals con tribute liberally, children's hospital societies make this an integral part of their work. Babies milk funds are clubs that are not fads, but represent a wide and commendable philanthropy. Medical associations, nurses' clubs, and pure milk commissions are leading contributors. Every depot has either a trained nurse or a physician in charge, and milk, medified to suit the needs of each special infant, may be prescribed and medical advice given when needed. St. Louis distribute each season 450,000 bottles of two, four five, seven, and eight-ounce sizes; Toledo 4,000 quarts a season; Kansas City, 1,800 quarts a month; Yonkers, 60 quarts daily; Rochester, 6,000 to 7,000 quarts each summer in nursing bottles; Chicago, 364,126 bottles every nine months; Philadelphia, over 800,000 bottles every nine months, and Baltimore, over 1,000 bottle daily. REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR GIRL

By HELEN ROWLAND.

Some men regard home as nothing but a "rest cure." Love seldom follows marriage, unless marriage follows love. Now is the time of the year when a man will pay $30 for a Panama hat that makes him look like 30 cents, and 30 cents for a drink that makes him feel like a millionaire.

The knots in the marriage tie which rub a man the wrong way are the "shall nots:" those which chafe a woman are the "ought nots." The social swim at present appears to be a whiripool, wherein a man gets soaked with either weak tea or cocktails. A woman can forgive her husband for murder, or bigamy, or arson; but she never can pardon him for calling her "a fright," or neglecting her in public or complimenting her worst enemy.

When a man makes a woman his wife it's the highest compliment he can pay her-and usually it's the last.

FROM WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW.
